I am sorry that I misunderstood. But I still feel like they are telling to send the warning letters to support the writing of the reg, otherwise why would we send warning letters now?

I guess my initial gut was correct but not a problem.

In the discussion today, they made it sound like the warning letters would help support the regulation writing. I guess I must have missed the nuance highlighted in Carie's email.

Hi all – Just to clarify one point, I don't believe that the WLs are needed to support the regulation, but they would serve the purpose of helping to communicate FDA's position on the safety of these products and to take enforcement action as needed while FDA is working on the rulemaking.

Bill and Mike,

Following a recent Center briefing, we are working towards (b) (5) [REDACTED] [REDACTED] While that is being drafted, we would also like to enhance our (b) (5) [REDACTED]. As a result of a discussion that was had today on formaldehyde, (b) (5) [REDACTED] [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] in order to identify any adulterated or misbranded products. Nakissa will work with Sabine Reilly to get something going. Let me know if you have any questions.
